Sunday Reflection – “Gel Your Hands! If you visit the Chelsea and Westminster hospital you will be familiar with the announcement, ‘help us to protect our patients, gel your hands’. This is a very good example of an instruction designed to improve the quality of life. In today’s first reading Moses appeals to the people to “take notice of the laws and customs that I teach you today, and observe them, that you may have life ...” The laws we are most familiar with are the Ten Commandments. The Commandments were not designed to restrict our freedom or make life difficult. On the contrary they are intended to make life happy and livable, to give us real quality of life. Imagine a world in which there was no killing or stealing. It is the will of God that we should live in peace, harmony, and freedom. The commandments were designed simply to enable the will of God to be fulfilled on earth. But there is always a danger that laws, and customs become an end in themselves. We can lose sight of the spirit that lies behind them. We can easily use the teachings we are blessed with to pass judgment on others, to point the finger at them if we see them failing and to feel self righteous about ourselves. This is what the Scribes and Pharisees were doing as they attempted to trap and condemn Jesus, but He was well aware of their hypocrisy. We should keep our laws so that we live good positive lives, serving God in each other and bringing others to Christ by our good example. Oh, and if you do visit the Chelsea and Westminster Hospital, don’t forget to Gel Your Hands!
